

December 30, 2013

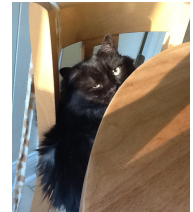

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my pleasure to recommend Gina Bullock, The Pet Nanny, as a trusted, reliable and competent pet sitter. We recently hired Gina when we went on a weeklong Caribbean cruise. We were very concerned because our beloved dog, Spencer, is 17 years old, was treated for cancer during the past year, and takes routine medication to prevent recurrence of the cancer and help with other aging issues. Spencer is a very picky eater, and getting pills down is a hassle. Also, Spencer adores my husband, who takes Spencer to work with him almost every day. We learned long ago that boarding Spencer was not good for him; he would stop eating and become depressed. We also have a cat with her own routine and preferences.

Spencer

Our longtime dog sitter became unable to help us, and we looked for a new sitter, hoping we would find one as attentive and loving as our former. Well, Gina was that, and lots more! Gina met with us before we left, and set our minds at ease because she said she would make our home her base of operations for the week. This meant we could count on her being there to let Spencer out in the middle of the night, ensure that he didn't spit all his pills out, ate his food, had routine walks and someone to rub his belly when he needed it!

Scrappy

We asked Gina to give us a daily report, and she not only sent text messages (we were in roaming mode on the cruise) but also included videos and photos of Spencer and Scrappy, our cat. We felt so comfortable on the trip because we knew Gina was caring for and loving our pets. She even bought peanut butter when Spencer started spitting out pills, so he would get all the meds he was supposed to!

Gina was there when we got home, so she could answer any questions we had and also tell us about her week with our pets. The mail was in a neat little pile, she had taken the garbage and recycling out and put the cans back, and left our home neat and clean. Even better, our pets were happy, well cared for and content.

Shortly after we returned, some last-minute business meetings scheduled my husband and me in two separate places for the entire day. I called Gina, who thankfully was available for a couple pet breaks during the day. I will not hesitate to call Gina again when we travel or need pet help during the day. She is extremely trustworthy and loving. (Ask her about her own Corgi ...you'll see!)

Sincerely,

Kate Stowell

Kate Stowell
Lakeland, FL